HOW TO ACCELERATE YOUR CAREER

There are several factors you should look at when making a career choice, including your personality, values, interests and skills. The goal of this process, called self-assessment, is to find a career that is a good match for you. Career skills are crucial to your ability to climb positions and successfully change jobs within an industry. Career change is also a scenario where your career training for specific abilities and skills will play a crucial role.

If you find yourself at your desk with some free time, here are few things you can do to help improve your career.

Find A Mentor: If you do nothing else on this list today, do this. Find someone (or several people) that you respect and ask them to mentor you. Most people will be more than happy to pass along advice that they have learned over the years which can be invaluable in helping your career. They will also be great people to use as a sounding board with ideas you have and help you figure out the best way to obtain the goals you are seeking to accomplish. A mentor can have amazing effects on your career and will make your advancements much easier.

Identify How You Procrastinate: We all do it, but if you can identify how you are doing it and put in a system to discourage yourself from doing so, you will dramatically increase your productivity. In most cases their big vice is watching TV far too much or spending too much time on social networking sites. Once you have identified places that you are spending too much time, take steps to reduce the amount of time you spend on them and instead use that time to further your career.

Pinpoint Work Essentials: The big myth in business is that the ones who work the hardest are the ones that get ahead the most. Working hard is important, but working smart is just as important. Working smart means finding the areas within your job that are essential to your group and to the company and focusing most of your resources in those area. This is one of the best pieces of advice what we can ever receive when working for a large company. Take some time to look at your job and what portions of it are most essential to others both inside and outside your group. If you pinpoint those areas that are most essential, you become the person that people come to when things need to get done.

Begin Making Lists: We used to think that making list is useless until we start making them yourself in a way that was useful for you. We actually should have two lists - one is a list of all the things we want to do and one is for our daily must do list. On the daily list, we can only place the three most important things we have to do that day and work on those three things until they are done. Once finished, then we can go to our general list and choose projects from there. This ensures that we get those things that we may not like to do as much that would be constantly delegated to the end of the longer list. How you develop your list to work for you may be very different, but creating a list system will help you be more productive. Once you complete something, do not throw the list away. Instead, date and file them in a work completed folder. This will allow you to have a documented list of all the tasks you accomplished which you can take out at your next performance review or when asking for a raise.

Learn Many Languages: As someone who was the worst student ever when it came to languages in school, we can have many proofs that absolutely anyone can learn any language. We think all of our language teachers would roll over in their graves if they knew we are proficient in other languages. Being proficient in more languages can open up a lot of career opportunities and is well worth pursuing if you have an interest in one. There are plenty of resources online.

Take Some Classes: Too many people feel that education ends when you receive that college diploma. In fact, it is a never ending pursuit even if you aren't taking formal classes. There are almost certainly classes you can take or skills that you can obtain that will make it easier for you to advance in your career. Take a few moments to talk with your boss or a mentor to find out what skills will make your advancement easier. Talk with your personnel department and ask if they will help pay for you to obtain these skills. Many will. It is easier than ever to take classes while working full time with online education.

Update Your Resume: Take some time to look over your resume to update it and improve it. It is always a good idea to have an up-to-date resume handy on the off chance that another opportunity arises. Make new copies and place them in your briefcase so that they are always ready to hand out.

Lunch Together: One of the most effective tools we can use when we work for a large company will be the lunch break. First, because we really did not like eating alone, but later because of all the advantages that come from it. Lunchtime gives you an opportunity to talk with people about ideas you have in a more informal setting than the office.

Love Your Job: Learn to love what you are doing or begin looking for something else. There are times when you may have to take a job that you do not particularly like, but there is no reason that you have to be stuck there. If you do not thoroughly enjoy what you are doing, start implementing steps to get a job that you do love. And if for some reason you don't know what you love, start experimenting. That is the only way to find out.

RICHARD REED, INNOCENT DRINKS

Turnover: over £100million

Number of employees: 250

HQ location: London, UK

Year founded: 1998

Ownership: privately-held

Richard Reed founded Innocent in 1998 with two friends from Cambridge University, Adam Balon and Jon Wright. When they left university they all got jobs with blue-chip companies - one went into advertising and two went into management consultancy. But that didn't stop them constantly talking about setting up a business - a conversation they'd been having since their student days.

Four years later they quit their jobs and decided to go into business after getting back from snowboarding holiday where they'd done nothing but talk about their desire to become entrepreneurs.

They decided to set up a business which would appeal to people like them – so they fixed on the theme of doing good to themselves. The result was Innocent, a drinks company producing pure fruit smoothies. The company now produces more than 30 different recipes and sells more than two million smoothies each week through 10,000 retailers in the UK and overseas.

Since Innocent was launched the company has been growing by 20% year on year and currently has a 75% share of the smoothie market. In April 2009 Coca-Cola bought an 18% stake in the company for £30 million. A year later it paid £65 million for a 58% stake.

Part of its marketing strategy is to use delivery vans which are decorated to look like cows or grassy fields. The company also prides itself on being 'a happy place to work' and 'people-oriented', with a relaxed working environment which includes having a grass floor in the office.

Вопросы и задания

Задание 1. Discuss the following quotation

“Good management is the art of making problems so interesting and their solutions so constructive that everyone wants to get to work and deal with them.”

— Paul Hawken, an environmentalist, entrepreneur, and author.

Задание 2. Read the following text. Discuss the main issues and ideas.

The Bolt that Holds the Ikea Empire Together

Ingvar Kamprad is no ordinary multi-billionaire. The founder of the Ikea furniture empire travels economy class, drives a 10-year old Volvo and buys his fruit and vegetables in the afternoon, when prices are often cheaper. Ask him about luxury in his life and he answers: “From time to time, I like to buy a nice shirt and cravat and eat Swedish caviar.

Mr. Kamprad is one of the greatest post-war entrepreneurs. What began as a mail-order business in 1943 has grown into an international retailing phenomenon across 31 countries, with 70 000 employees.

Sales have risen every single year. The Ikea catalogue is the world’s biggest annual print run – an incredible 110 m copies a year. And Mr. Kamprad has grown extraordinarily rich. He is worth £8,7bn and is the 17th richest person in the world according to the Forbes, US magazine.

The concept behind Ikea’s amazing success is unbelievably simple: make affordable, well-designed furniture available to the masses. And then there is Mr. Kamprad himself – charismatic, humble, private. It is his ideas and values that are at the core of Ikea’s philosophy.

Best known for his extremely modest lifestyle, he washes plastic cups to recycle them. He has just left his long-standing Swedish barber, because he found one in Switzerland, where he lives, who charges only £6 for a cut. “That’s a reasonable amount”, he chuckles.

All Ikea executives are aware of the value of cost-consciousness. They are strongly discouraged from travelling first or business class. “There is no better form of leadership than setting a good example. I could never accept that I should travel first class while my colleagues sit in tourist class”, Mr. Kamprad says.

As he walks around the group’s stores he expresses the feeling of “togetherness” physically, clasping and hugging his employees. This is very uncharacteristic of Sweden. “Call me Ingvar”, he says to staff. The informality and lack of hierarchy are emphasized by his dress style, with an open-necked shirt preferred to a tie.

Mr. Kamprad has had both personal and business battles. He has fought against dyslexia and illness.

One of Mr. Kamprad’s characteristics is that his obsessive attention to details. When he visits his stores, he talks not only to the managers but also to floor staff and customers. A recent visit to six of the group’s Swedish stores has produced ‘100 details to discuss’, he says.

By his own reckoning, his greatest strength is choosing the right people to run his businesses.

He is determined that the group will not go public, because short-term share-holder demands conflict with long-term planning. “I hate short-termist decisions. If you want to take long-lasting decisions, it’s very difficult to be on the stock exchange. When entering the Russian market, we had to decide to lose money for 10 years”.

Mr. Kamprad has been slowly withdrawing from the business since 1986 when he stepped down as group president. He maintains that he is still “too much involved and in too many details”, although he admits to a distinct reluctance to withdraw altogether.

The questions is: Can there be an eternal Ikea without Mr. Kamprad? Does the group depend too much on its founder? Will the empire continue as control of Ikea gradually moves to Mr. Kamprad’s three sons?

Задание 3. Discuss the following questions.

1. What, in your opinion, are the strengths and weaknesses of Ingvar Kamrad?
2. Would you like to work on him?
3. When is the correct time for a leader or founder to leave his or her company?

16 NEW LAND ROVERS REVEALED

Land Rover's line-up is set to expand to 16 models by 2020 - and we've got the details of them all, including a 4m baby three-door, and BMW X5 rival and a five-car Defender family

Land Rover has embarked on a massive new model blitz that could more than double its annual sales by 2020. It is almost certainly the biggest investment that the UK car industry has ever seen. Land Rover's future model line-up will fully cover the three main areas of the booming global SUV market – luxury, leisure and utility.

According to Land Rover's design director Gerry McGovern, the brand is set to expand all three of its model families. The plans include additional models for the Range Rover line-up, a new Defender family and a radical expansion of the Freelander range that will create four new 'leisure' SUVs during the next seven years.

Land Rover sources refuse to estimate the potential size of the car-maker once the seven-year plan has been introduced. However, market data suggests the global SUV market will reach 22 million units by 2020. If, by radically expanding its line-up, Land Rover captured around three per cent of that market, it would be close to producing 600,000 vehicles annually.

Hilton Holloway: What is Land Rover chasing?

According to what McGovern describes as a "holistic approach" to its future range, Land Rover plans to extend the Range Rover line-up to six models, including an 'Evoque XL', which slots into the hole that currently exists between the Evoque and the new Range Rover Sport and a convertible Evoque. A baby three-door Range Rover just 4m long is also being considered.

The new Land-Rover-badged 'leisure' line-up will have at least five new models, kicking off with an entry-level Freelander similar in size to today's Evoque. The Freelander itself will be reinvented in five-seat and seven-seat forms. The range will be topped by a new Discovery, which could switch to an aluminium platform, and be offered as a flagship to rival the successful BMW X5.

In the 'dual purpose' or 'utility' segment, Land Rover's plan indicates that a production version of the Evoque-based DC100 is heading for the showroom, as well as the long-discussed replacement for the Defender.

McGovern's plan shows outline drawings for five-seat and seven-seat new Defenders as well as a crew-cab pick-up.

This dramatic expansion will put a huge strain on the investment and engineering capabilities of Jaguar Land Rover. JLR boss Ralf Speth has already spoken about 40 new JLR product launches in the next five years. He has pledged £2bn a year to underpin this, with the £10bn investment funding at least one new platform, plus increased capacity in the UK.

However, not all of this investment is expected to be focused on the UK. JLR is wisely spreading its production footprint around the world to take advantage of booming global markets.

Reports from China in early October said that the JLR joint venture with Chinese car maker Chery gained approval in record time from the Chinese National Development and Reform Commission. About £1.8 billion will be invested in a new Chinese plant that will, in the first stages, have the capacity to build 130,000 vehicles per year, about 60 per cent of which will be Land Rover models. Reports say that Land Rover sales in China hit 47,975 units in the first eight months of the year, 85 per cent up on the same period in 2011. Its 96 Chinese dealer outlets will also soon be expanded by a further 47 showrooms.

China is now JLR's second biggest market, just behind the UK, and Chinese tastes are increasingly turning away from conventional luxury saloon cars towards SUVs.

Buyers of premium vehicles in China and Russia are also pushing for the opportunity to buy more limited-edition vehicles and customised styling packs, an opportunity JLR's design teams are eager to capitalise on.

Back in the UK, JLR has put the finishing touches to its new aluminium press shop at Solihull and has just completed a new quality inspection building for the new Range Rover and its future sister vehicles.

Work is also underway on the new JLR engine factory to be built in the West Midlands/Staffordshire area, while much of the research work into a new generation of super-frugal four-cylinder 'Hotfire' engines is being carried out by UK universities, including Warwick and Loughborough (by Hilton Holloway).

Задание 1. Read the comments. Use specific reasons and examples to support your answer.

1. Define teamwork: what do you value and what do you do?
2. What next – words are not enough?

Задание 2: Read the text. When you first read the text, don't worry about the numbers in brackets. You will fill in the gaps in the following Exercise.

THERE'S NO "I" IN COMPANY: THE IMPORTANCE OF TEAMWORK IN THE COMPANY

Have you ever wondered why a business plan should include a section on the (1)_____ team? What about why the leadership team is mentioned in a public company's annual report? The answer is simple. People make the company.

No matter how brilliant a business idea, people must carry it out, and the wrong people will fail, disappointing investors. The leadership team sets the tone at the top. If they are capable team players, then they spread the message that teamwork is vital to the company's success, and the company's employees will strive to work together.

Have you ever worked on a team where everyone got along well, did their part, and felt free to share ideas? Did this experience not produce better results than when you worked on a team where everyone argued, some lazy people did nothing, and a loud few dominated the (2)_____? Teamwork, or lack thereof, distinguishes these two experiences.

If you had a choice of working in a company where teamwork is a vital part of the (3)_____ culture versus a company where teamwork doesn't exist, where would you want to work? I would choose the company with teamwork because working for it would be less stressful. I am an intelligent, capable worker, but I don't want to have so much work that it takes over my life. Such a situation would lead to burnout, which could inspire me to quit my job. Companies don't like having high employee turnover if it can be avoided because it can raise their recruitment, training, and compensation costs.

Being able to split jobs up into smaller tasks which are assigned to multiple people, management can increase productivity by better utilizing its employees. Instead of having one person complete a whole process, start to finish, the company can give that person the tasks in the process that best align with his skill set, thereby cutting down on that employee's frustration level resulting from doing what he isn't good at. Constant repetition of specific types of tasks will make that employee more (4)_____ at them, decreasing production time. This can mean less overtime, which saves the company money (for hourly employees). From the employees' point of view, doing things faster and working less overtime means going home earlier, creating a better work-life balance.

Now a process is as slow as its slowest step. If the slower steps are sped up, then the whole process can be completed much faster. Identification of better ways to perform a process requires help from the people performing the process. How helpful do you think these employees will be if they feel that their jobs are threatened? An environment where teamwork is emphasized can change how these people think about their jobs, making them more likely to cooperate in process redesign. They should be more willing to answer questions about how the process currently works. In addition, team players should be more likely to voice their ideas for improving things because they're used to thinking that people listen to their input and take it into (5)_____.

In a teamwork environment, the team takes responsibility for the process they are performing, and the employees are (6)_____. That means if one person spots something wrong that doesn't relate to his task, he is more likely to mention the problem to the relevant person, so it can be fixed. Thus, the process's output should be of higher quality. This can result in higher revenue because customers appreciate high quality.

(7)_____ can result in happier employees, and happier employees will be more interested in doing what's good for the company, instead of sabotaging the company's efforts. Like I said before, people make the company (by Samuilovna, Yahoo Contributor Network).

COLLOCATIONS FOR KEY BUSINESS WORDS

A collocation is a pair or group of words that are often used together. There are many types of collocation. Here are some examples:

verb+ noun

make an arrangement, set up a business, reach a decision

adjective + noun

fixed cost, part-time job, competitive advantage

noun+ noun

insurance company, business plan, information technology

sentence heads

What exactly do you mean by ... ?, Give my best wishes to ...

fixed expressions

Last but not least, Time is money, See you later.

The English language is full of collocations, and every unit of this book includes many examples. Why are they important? Because learning words individually is only half the story. You also have to learn how words combine with each other. And if you can learn the whole collocation as one item - instead of thinking of the individual words one-by-one - your speech will become more fluent.

ROAD RAGERS IN THE SKY

Airlines and their long-suffering customers are reporting a steep climb in air rage incidents. Some incidents are apparently caused by problems which are familiar to many regular travellers. One case reported from America stemmed from an interminable delay in takeoff, when passengers were cooped up in their aircraft on the tarmac for four hours, without food, drink or information. Mass unrest is less common than individual misbehaviour, as in the case of the convict who recently went crazy on a flight, attacked the crew and tried to open the door in mid-flight.

The psychology of air rage is a new area of study, and there are almost as many explanations as examples. Most analysts of the phenomenon blame alcohol, but many people now think that the airlines are at fault. To cut costs, they are cramming ever more passengers into their aircraft, while reducing cabin crew, training, and quality of service, all of which increase passenger frustration. In addition, there is increasing concern in the US about another cost-cutting exercise, which could seriously harm passengers' health: cabin ventilation.

Modern aircraft are equipped with sophisticated air conditioning devices – but running them at optimum capacity burns up valuable aviation fuel. Many airlines routinely instruct their flight crews to run the systems on minimum settings. Campaigners for improved air quality claim that this can lead to irritability and disorientation.

In the US, the soaring number of passenger complaints across a wide range of issues is reflected in a number of new internet sites which criticize the airline and demand better service. One of the sites is demanding an air passengers' Bill of Rights.

Cabin and flight crews, who are in the front line of the battle against disruptive and dangerous in-flight behaviour, have called for stiffer penalties against the offenders. Management have also called for legislation – while denying that its cost-cutting practices have contributed to the problem. But there are some signs, in the US at least, that the airlines are at last attempting to respond to customer dissatisfaction. Some major lines have announced concessions to the most frequent complaint for all, and are removing seats to make more room for their customers.

Задание 2. Read the article about Steve Job Co-Founder and Mastermind of Apple. Put a circle around words related to success and achievement.

STEVE JOBS'S SUCCESS STORY

“Your time is limited, so don't waste it living someone else's life. Don't be trapped by dogma – which is living with the results of other people's thinking. Don't let the noise of other's opinions drown out your own inner voice. And most important, have the courage to follow your heart and intuition. They somehow already know what you truly want to become. Everything else is secondary.”

On February 24 1955, a man was born who would have change the whole world in the future. Not only by creating the Apple Inc. but changing the way we communicate. His contribution to the scientific world is enormous and his success story could be the leading path for many growing computer scientists. Drawing inspiration from Steve Jobs – studying him, and learning from him, now that could give you strength to achieve your goals.

Young Steve grew up in a valley which was already turning into the world center of computer technology: Silicon Valley. In his early ears he showed his interests into electronics and met Stephen Wozniak — commonly known as Woz with whom he shared his visions in computer technology. Before Steve began to work with Woz, he went to the Reed College in Oregon. He spent there only one semester after which he dropped out and spent a lot of time learning about Eastern mysticism and diets in his hippie period.

Always when we hear the name of Steve Jobs our first association leads to Apple. It all began with assembling the boards in Steve's garage and driving to local computer stores to try and sell them. The Apple computer was much more advanced product than the others on the market, that's why Steve set out to find venture capitalists to fund Apple's expansion. The success was enormous and soon the product became the symbol of the personal computing revolution worldwide. The company grew fast and as a result in December 1980, when he was only 25, his net worth passed the $200 million mark on that day. After the success of the Apple products, Steve focused his energy on other projects like the Lisa computer, which was a breakthrough because it used a graphical user interface instead of a command-line interface. Unfortunately Steve was thrown out of the Lisa project, that's why he took something as an act of “revenge” by taking over a small project called Macintosh. It's success was no wonder but after few years, again because of his arrogance, Steve was kicked out of this project. That was his life, so he started travelling looking around for other ways to spend his creativity. Suddenly in 1985 he had the chance to share his dream in making animated movies with computers. He was introduced to a small team of brilliant computer graphics experts that George Lucas was trying to sell, so he gathered the team and bought the company for $10 Million in 1986, incorporating it as Pixar. In the next years Steve started other projects like the NeXt Computers which however didn't sell. In addition to the NeXt "failure" his investment in Pixar also seemed to lead nowhere, so after his devastation, he spent more time with his son Reed and his wife Laurene, whom he had married in 1991.

In the course of the next years Steve had a great success with Pixar, taking part in the Toy Story movie, which raised his net worth to over $1.5 billion! Meanwhile in 1997 the Apple Company announced losses of $700 million, so it was the perfect time for Steve Jobs and his comeback. He quickly gave confidence in the whole Apple community and brought the company back to its full greatness. In 2000 Steve accepted to become full CEO of Apple – that was the first time ever in the history of a man being CEO of two companies at the same time!

However the biggest success in Apple came from the unexpected source iPod. It turned to be the "must-have-music player" for everyone. The products such as the iPad (Apple's iOS-based tablet, which Steve unveiled on January 27, 2010) the MacBook and others are the most preferred in the world's society. Steve Jobs is truly an extraordinary man who opened a new page in the technological world. People such as him are those, who write the pages in the world history book.

Unfortunately sometimes life is unfair even to the ones who make the world evolve. In 2004 Steve announced that he had been diagnosed with a cancerous tumor in his pancreas. So in August 2011, Jobs resigned as CEO of Apple, but remained at the company as chairman of the company's board (from boompedia.com).

Задание 3. 1. What do you think of Apple products?

2. Do you agree or disagree with Steve Job's quotation: "I think if you do something and it turns out pretty good, then you should go do something else wonderful, not dwell on it for too long. Just figure out what's next."

Вопросы и задания

Задание 1. Read the comments. Use specific reasons and examples to support your answer.

1. Relationship-building is not the same as team-building. When we talk about relationship-building we are talking about a competency in which we cultivate relationships both inside and outside the workplace, with individuals and groups

2. If we are in a conflictive situation with somebody, we should focus on the issue and not on the person.

3. should we try to get to know colleagues outside the office?

Задание 2. Read the text.

WHAT DO WE MEAN BY RELATIONSHIP-BUILDING?

When we talk about the competency of relationship-building in the world of business, we are referring to building strong relationships with partners and clients – about using interpersonal skills to network in an effective way.

What does a competent relationship-builder do?

Somebody who is competent at relationship-building focuses on understanding the needs of the client and getting the best possible results. This competency promotes an ethic of client service and so an understanding and anticipation of a client's changing needs is essential. Stress and conflict are other issues that a competent relationship-builder will manage - keeping composed and acting as mediator when conflicts arise.

How can I start to develop the competency of relationship-building?

First identify the business plan goals of your department and decide what your role is going to be in helping to achieve those goals. You will need to study the business plan and learn as much as possible about your clients' activities, interests and needs. This information might be available in their own annual reports or in client surveys conducted by your company. Talking to your clients about how you can best meet their needs is also a sensible first step to take.

Seven steps to becoming an effective relationship-builder:

Draw up a plan of what you need to do in order to give your clients what they want. Discuss your ideas with your line manager and then do what is necessary to implement the plan.

When the plan has been set in motion, schedule regular meetings with your line manager to review the progress that you are making and make any necessary adjustments.

When you are working as part of a team or group within a department or a company it is important to assess your contribution to the group's work. Think about how your efforts help or hinder progress.

Make a weekly analysis of your commitments. Set yourself a goal for each week so that you follow them through. Make an effort to do what you say you are going to do – and also, to do it by the time that you say it will be done. If you get into the habit of doing this it will become like second nature.

Build up a file of contacts and classify them in a way that is meaningful for your particular work context. Then you will know exactly who to call with any queries or when you need information.

Don't just wait for feedback to come to you, request it from a variety of sources – from your line manager but also from colleagues, clients and people who you supervise. Listen to what they have to say and act accordingly.

Build informal relationships with the people who are working around you. Make a point of greeting people who you normally don't speak to. Ask them about their interests and make it a goal to practise small talk with them. Listen to what they say and remember so that you can ask about a particular interest the next time you meet.

Types of Planning in Business

Suchi Moorthy, a business consultant defined the main types of business plans:

Start-Up Plans

This plan is the defining step for any new business. It has an executive summary in the beginning and the projections for the first year. It also lists the company's aspirations and strategies in terms of product or service to be produced, the market in which it is going to operate, implementation milestones and the team that is going to implement them.

Feasibility Plans

This plan ascertains whether a business must be set up. This is an extension of a start-up plan. It has an executive summary, mission statement, goals, analysis of the market, costs, pricing and likely expenditure.

Internal Plans

These plans, as the name suggests, are internal to the organization. The organization's planned working style is briefly listed here. Each functional department has an internal plan for its functioning and operations. These usually include implementation milestones, time frames and the responsibilities of the people who would execute the work.

Strategic Plans

This planning is for the overall picture. With a strategic plan the organization chalks out all the alternatives available and the trade-offs in choosing any one over the others. Also, the priorities are underlined and the ends and means toward achieving targets are spelled out clearly.

Growth Plans

This plan chalks out the organization's path toward expansion. This almost always includes views on investments, operations, finances, time and personnel resources. Also, if the company is planning to introduce a new product, this planning comes in handy (by Suchi Moorthy, eHow Contributor).

Five Essential Elements of a Good Business Plan

When developing your business plan ensure that you have kept the following in mind. Stop and ask yourself the following? If the answer to your question is "yes", continue, but if it is "no", stop and revise what you have written until you are satisfied that you can answer "yes" to each question.

Is my business plan simple?

Make sure your business plan is easy to understand and to implement. Is it a practical document and will anyone who picks it up get a clear picture of what you're wanting to achieve?

Is my business plan specific?

You need to ensure that your goals are specific and measurable. Does your action plan include deadlines, budgets and who's going to get the job done.

Is my business plan realistic?

Don't set yourself up for failure. Ensure that when you set your goals that you've actually looked at what it'll take to implement. Make sure that your sales goals are achievable.

Is my business plan complete?

Make sure that you have included all the relevant aspects of your business. While the purpose of some business plans differ there are specific business plan basics in every document. Make sure you're thorough and rather include too much detail rather than too little.

Are My Goals SMART?

Make sure that you have adopted the principle of SMART goals:

specific measurable achievable realistic timely

RICHARD REED, INNOCENT DRINKS

Turnover: over £100million

Number of employees: 250

HQ location: London, UK

Year founded: 1998

Ownership: privately-held

Richard Reed founded Innocent in 1998 with two friends from Cambridge University, Adam Balon and Jon Wright. When they left university they all got jobs with blue-chip companies - one went into advertising and two went into management consultancy. But that didn't stop them constantly talking about setting up a business - a conversation they'd been having since their student days. Four years later they quit their jobs and decided to go into business after getting back from snowboarding holiday where they'd done nothing but talk about their desire to become entrepreneurs.

They decided to set up a business which would appeal to people like them – so they fixed on the theme of doing good to themselves. The result was Innocent, a drinks company producing pure fruit smoothies. The company now produces more than 30 different recipes and sells more than two million smoothies each week through 10,000 retailers in the UK and overseas.

Since Innocent was launched the company has been growing by 20% year on year and currently has a 75% share of the smoothie market. In April 2009 Coca-Cola bought an 18% stake in the company for £30 million. A year later it paid £65 million for a 58% stake.

Part of its marketing strategy is to use delivery vans which are decorated to look like cows or grassy fields. The company also prides itself on being 'a happy place to work' and 'people-oriented', with a relaxed working environment which includes having a grass floor in the office.

Key advice

"If you're 70% sure about an idea then go for it. Because if you wait till you're 100% confident in business... you'll never make a decision, you'll never get anywhere."

Рекомендации по оформлению видов и форм отчетности по самостоятельной работе

Методические рекомендации по оформлению сочинения-рассуждения:

Сочинение-рассуждение – письменная работа, в которой студент выражает свои мысли, аргументирует свое мнение и рассуждает по конкретной теме. Написание сочинений-рассуждений на иностранном языке способствует развитию языковых навыков, аналитического мышления, способности к аргументации и повышению уверенности в письменной и устной коммуникации, что является необходимым для успешной профессиональной деятельности.

Сочинение должно быть логичным и грамматически правильным. Объем работы составляет 1-2 страницы текста (не более 300-400 слов).

Сочинение должно быть логично структурировано и состоять из трёх основных частей:

1. Введение (Краткое введение в тему сочинения. В этом разделе студент должен обозначить, почему выбранная профессия важна для него лично и для общества в целом. Можно указать на значимость профессии воспитателя в полилингвальной среде и необходимость освоения иностранных языков в профессиональной деятельности.)
2. Основная часть (Ключевая часть работы, где студент должен подробно рассмотреть свои мотивы выбора профессии. Ожидается, что в данной части будет раскрыто, какие качества, навыки и знания необходимы воспитателю в дошкольном образовании, какие особенности работы с детьми в полилингвальной среде. Важно отметить, как знание иностранных языков влияет на работу воспитателя и какую роль оно играет в создании полноценной образовательной среды.)
3. Заключение (В заключении студент должен подвести итоги, сделав выводы о значимости выбранной профессии и о своём отношении к ней. Необходимо также отметить, как знание иностранного языка поможет в профессиональной деятельности в будущем.)

Критерии оценки результатов самостоятельной работы

Критериями оценок результатов внеаудиторной самостоятельной работы студента являются:

- Логичность и последовательность изложения мыслей.
- Соблюдение структуры сочинения.
